

Advertisement of Open Positions in Job Openings for Economists, the American Economic Association Job Registry

The Department of Economics and Finance invites applications for two tenure-track assistant professor positions beginning in the fall 2018. Successful candidates would be able to teach some combination of the following: Urban/Regional, Macroeconomics, International, Labor, Industrial Organization, Money and Banking, or Public Choice. Candidates are expected to advise students and provide campus and community service. Minimum qualifications include: Ph.D. in economics and a demonstrated ability for high quality teaching and research. Submit a letter of interest, curriculum vitae, evidence of teaching effectiveness, and 3 letters of recommendation. All materials must be submitted via email. Members of the department will attend the ASSA meetings to conduct initial interviews. Louisiana Tech University, an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer with smoke- and tobacco-free campuses, is committed to a multicultural environment and strongly encourages applications from minorities, females, veterans, and individuals with disabilities. For reference and compliance, employment policies and other university policies and procedures are included in the on-line University Policies and Procedures Manual to be found at www.latech.edu/tech/administration/policies-and-procedures. Employment will require a criminal background check according to University guidelines. CONTACT: Sharon Hughes, Department of Economics and Finance, sharon@latech.edu.